

November 30, 2009

6

tweets

retweet

Does anyone know what time it is?

By fivemonkeysreview on 3:28 PM Gift Guide, giveaways

Thanks to Timex, my husband now does! Timex has been a trusted watch brand for a VERY long time. I mean seriously when you think of awesome watches for a great price, you think about Timex. Timex doesn't do anything but help you tell time (well, their watches do a lot more than help you tell time as you will see in a moment).

My husband has a hard time keeping a watch. See he works in the civil engineering field and is around a lot of harsh things. I can't even begin to count the number of watches he has lost over the years because they were banged up against something in the shop. How many watch bands were broken because he dropped a core sample on them. Watches, phones, glasses. Nothing is safe. But it comes with the job. So I contacted the wonderful people who represent Timex to see if they had a watch that would stand up to his work. And guess what...they do!

Donnie was sent the E-Tide Temp Compass Watch to review. Boy to have had a picture of his face when he opened that package! LOL Unfortunately FedEx came as we were walking out the door and we just grabbed the package and ran. He spent two days with the tech guy at work figuring out all the little bells and whistles that come with the watch. The description of the E-Tide states that the watch is up to any challenge no matter which way it comes from. We are trying hard to find out. Okay not really, but so far so good! Some of the features and nifty things it does are:

*INDIGLO Night-Light with NIGHT-MODE

*Distinct Fourth Indicator Hand

*Tide Tracker Counts Down to High or Low Tide

*Digital Thermometer with Analog Display Measures Air and Water Temperature

*Accurate Digital Compass with Analog Display

*Adjustable Declination Angle for Accuracy

The compass definitely came in handy this past weekend when Donnie and 16 other guys went hunting out in the woods. No woman in sight. So you know someone got lost, wouldn't ask for directions...lol! Seriously, though Donnie said the compass kept him and his "hunting buddy" on track and they could go out further than the other guys. It is a sturdy durable watch that I am sure will last him a good long time. He is loving all the little features. And if I do say so myself it looks pretty dam cool!

If you like watches with less buttons and features, Timex has a watch for you. Want a kids watch? Timex has you covered. Are you an athlete? Timex has a watch for you too! There are seriously watches for everyone.

Win It!!!

The great people from Catalyst Public Relations and Timex are offering one very lucky reader the exact watch my husband was able to review. Okay not his watch, one of your own. I don't think he will be giving his up without a fight!

Mandatory entry:

Visit Timex and let me know another watch that you would like to own.

Optional entries:

Follow this blog

Suscribe to this fun

Grab my button or add me to your blogroll

Blog about this giveaway linking to both Timex and myself for 5 entries

Become a Facebook Fan

Follow me on twitter and tweet about this giveaway (can be done 2x a day)

Link this giveaway anywhere on the web!

Giveaway will end on December 14th @ 11:59 pm. Open to US only!